Title A summary catalogue of Western manuscripts in the Bodleian Library at Oxford.

Creator Hunt, Richard William

Publisher Details Oxford University Press

Publication Date 1953

Description PREFACE

Reviewing an earlier volume of the Summary Catalogue, Sir George Warner spoke of the 'bewildering multiplicity of Bodleian nomenclature'. In the introduction to the present volume I have attempted to write an historical guide to the tangle, to trace the growth of methods of classification and to record what is known of the many catalogues of manuscripts in use in the Library during its long history. The subject is technical, and few users of the Summary or Quarto Catalogues will wish to master all its complexities; but every student of manuscripts knows well how important a knowledge of early shelf-marks and catalogues can be for critical purposes. It is, moreover, fitting that the work of earlier scholars who have laboured to make

Title Summary catalogue of Post-Medieval Western manuscripts in the Bodleian Library, Oxford

Creator Clapinson, Mary Rogers, Td

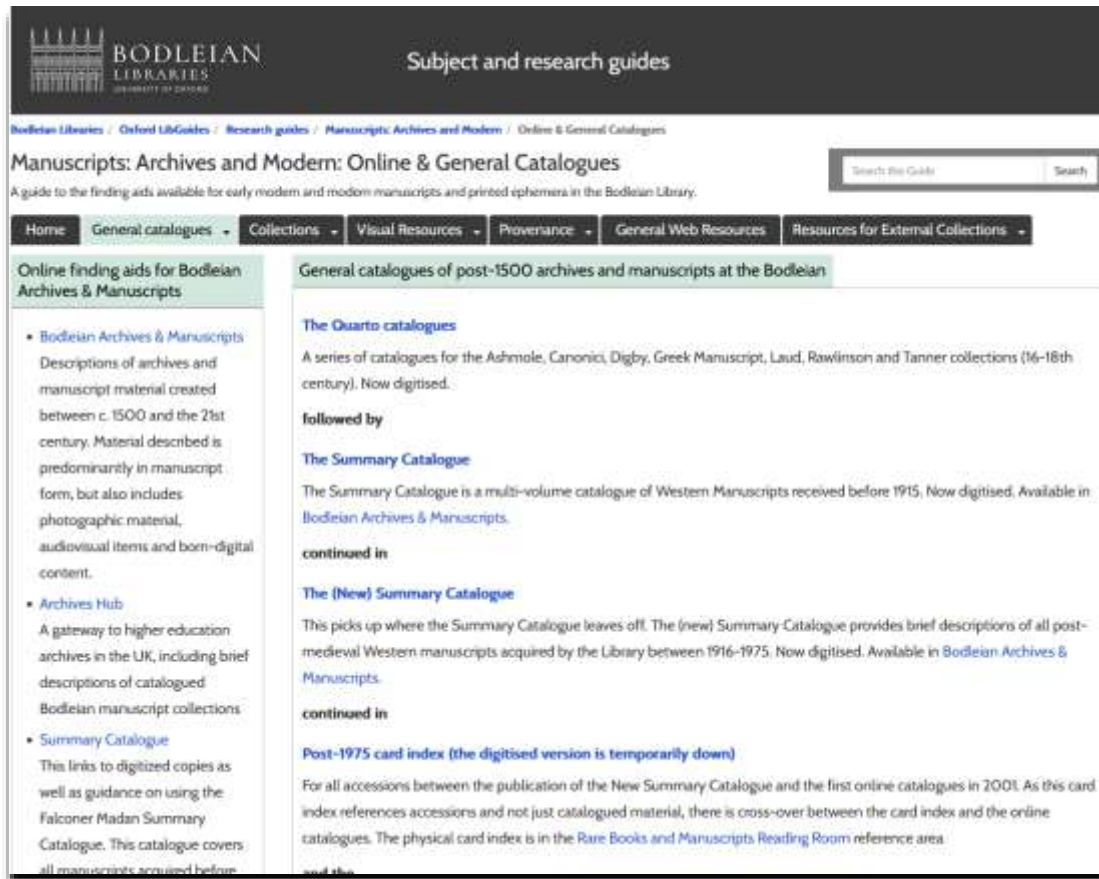

Publisher Details Oxford University Press

Publication Date 1991

Description Preface

It fell to me as Keeper of Western Manuscripts in 1976 to take the decision to produce this catalogue, and in 1986 to write the Introduction to it. It now falls to me almost five years later as Bodley's Librarian to write the Preface. The intervening years have seen Mrs. Mary Clapinson become Keeper of Western Manuscripts and Mr. T. D. Rogers her deputy. They have also been years of considerable financial austerity in the Bodleian Library during which, because of staff shortages, the cataloguing of the collections of Western manuscripts has

Welcome to the website of the Oxford Archivists' Consortium

Oxford contains the largest concentration of archival repositories in the south-east. The documents they hold include the papers of local government and administration, the records of the University and its colleges, business records, and personal correspondence. Museums and galleries all have their own papers about their collections and collectors. There are maps and plans, archaeological records, the papers of religious institutions and politicians, charity and health records, and the papers of schools. In fact, there is very little you won't find in an archive somewhere in Oxford.

Although these pages deal principally with the archives of the Oxford colleges, you will find information about, and links to, many other local archives and to other resources which will help you in your research.

The Oxford Archivists' Consortium (OAC) was set up in 2001 to provide a support network for all those working in archives in the city. We hope that these pages will answer any questions you have about archives in Oxford but if the answer you are looking for evades you, please contact OAC and we should be able to point you in the right direction.

About AIM25

AIM25 is an educational charity supporting the development of and public access to historical archives held in the London area.

Archives come in many forms, but include old photographs, diaries, maps, sound and film recordings and much more. They are usually unique and irreplaceable and tell many stories about the history of London and the world. Furthermore, many historic archives remain at risk, for example when the owners of collections move home, when buildings are cleared out prior to redevelopment or when organisations run out of space.

AIM25 provides online access to collection level descriptions from the archives of over one hundred and fifty higher education institutions, learned societies, local authorities, cultural organisations and livery companies within the region, for the purposes of research, teaching and public enjoyment.

This work is in progress - new data is always being added, so please visit often to see latest additions.
